The Honorable Sonny Perdue
Secretary of Agriculture
U.S. Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Ave., SW
Washington, DC 20250
Submitted to GMOlabeling@ams.usda.gov

Dear Secretary Perdue:

We, the undersigned farmers and eaters, believe transparency is fundamental to our democracy and indispensable to a fair and competitive marketplace. Food is no different. When it comes to GMOs, we want to know what's in our food and how it is grown.

After many years of debate, a national GMO disclosure bill was signed into law last year. The USDA must ensure that this new law upholds Americans' right to know what's in their food, with information accessible for everyone. USDA must require food companies to:

- 1) Disclose all GMOs. All GMO foods must carry GMO labels. In addition, all foods containing GMO ingredients (such as refined sugars and oils), and foods with ingredients derived from all forms of genetic engineering (like CRISPR and RNAi) must carry GMO labels.
- 2) Ingredient-by-Ingredient Disclosures: GMO foods should be labeled on an ingredient-by-ingredient basis so that consumers know exactly which ingredients are produced with genetic engineering.
- 3) Rules for Digital Options: Some food companies may try to hide behind QR codes. The USDA rules must ensure that codes are easy to scan and that they work every time. The USDA must require that retailers provide scanners to accommodate consumers who do not have smartphones.
- 4) No More Delays: Americans have waited long enough for GMO labeling. The USDA should ensure that they meet the two-year deadline and draft rules by July 2018.

We are counting on the USDA as it implements the new GMO labeling law to protect Americans' right to know what's in their food, and to access the information they desire about GMOs in the simplest, clearest and most equitable manner possible.

Sincerely,

Farm Aid and the 1,085 undersigned:
