Dear USDA:

I have been a dairy farmer in northeastern Pennsylvania for over 50 years. I am writing to voice my recommendation on the pricing of milk. The current method for pricing milk is not sufficient to keep any farm in business. There have been many farms that have gone out of business recently, and many are planning to go out of business in the near future. I recommend that the USDA use a new methodology to determine the dairy farmers prices. This method MUST contain the dairy farmers' cost of production. This is important for keeping this country's farmers in business, so that America will not fall victim to milk price gouging from any other country.

Please include the dairy farmers' cost of production in your pricing formula. It will benefit all parties in the long run.

Thank you,
Glenn A. Nulton
